HR POLICY HANDBOOK

Sample document for learning PDF loading, chunking, embeddings, and RAG retrieval

Document owner: Human Resources Department Version: 1.0 Effective date: 1 January 2026

Important: This is a fictional sample policy created for software-development and RAG demonstrations. It is not legal advice and does not represent the rules of any real employer.

1. Purpose and Scope

This handbook explains sample workplace policies for employees of Example Technologies Pvt. Ltd. It covers working hours, attendance, leave, remote work, conduct, information security, performance reviews, and employee support. The policies apply to regular full-time employees unless a section says otherwise. Interns, contractors, and temporary staff should follow the terms in their individual agreements and any policy specifically extended to them.

2. Working Hours and Attendance

The standard work schedule is Monday through Friday, 9:30 a.m. to 6:30 p.m., with a one-hour meal break. Teams may adopt a different schedule with manager approval, provided business coverage is maintained. Employees are expected to record attendance using the company-approved attendance system. If an employee expects to be late or absent, they should notify their manager as early as reasonably possible.

Employees should not ask another person to record attendance on their behalf or alter attendance records without authorization. Repeated unexplained absence or inaccurate attendance records may be reviewed by Human Resources and the employee's manager.

3. Leave Policy

For this sample policy, eligible full-time employees receive the following annual leave allocation:

Leave type	Annual allowance	General guidance
Casual leave	12 working days	For personal matters or short-notice needs; request in advance when possible.
Sick leave	10 working days	Inform the manager promptly. A medical certificate may be requested for extended absence.
Earned / privilege leave	15 working days	Planned leave should normally be submitted at least 7 calendar days in advance.
Company holidays	As published annually	The HR team publishes the holiday calendar at the start of each year.

Leave requests should be submitted through the HR portal and are subject to manager approval and team coverage. Employees should not assume leave is approved until they receive confirmation. Unused leave carry-forward, encashment, and leave during notice periods are governed by the applicable employment terms and the current HR circular.

4. Remote and Hybrid Work

Remote or hybrid work may be permitted based on role requirements, team arrangements, information-security controls, and manager approval. Employees working remotely must remain reachable during agreed working hours, attend scheduled meetings, protect company information from viewing by unauthorized people, and use approved devices and networks. A manager may ask an employee to attend the office for business needs with reasonable notice.

5. Code of Conduct and Respectful Workplace

All employees must behave professionally and treat colleagues, customers, vendors, and visitors with dignity and respect. Harassment, discrimination, bullying, threats, retaliation, and abusive conduct are not acceptable. Employees should raise concerns with Human Resources, their manager, or the designated reporting channel. Reports will be handled as confidentially as practical and reviewed fairly.

Employees must disclose actual or potential conflicts of interest, avoid accepting inappropriate gifts or benefits, and use company resources for authorized business purposes. Retaliation against anyone who raises a concern in good faith or participates in an investigation is prohibited.

6. Information Security and Confidentiality

Employees must protect confidential business, customer, employee, and technical information. Use strong passwords and multi-factor authentication where available. Do not share credentials, send restricted information to personal email accounts, install unapproved software, or store company data on unauthorized services. Suspected phishing, lost devices, accidental disclosures, or security incidents must be reported promptly to the IT or security team.

Company information should be accessed only when required for assigned work. Employees must follow data-retention, classification, access-control, and secure-disposal instructions. Confidentiality obligations continue after employment ends, subject to applicable law.

7. Performance and Development

Managers should communicate role expectations, provide regular feedback, and discuss development goals with employees. A formal performance review is normally conducted once each year, with interim check-ins as appropriate. Reviews may consider agreed objectives, quality of work, collaboration, reliability, and demonstrated skills. Employees may add comments or request clarification about feedback.

Training may be provided based on business needs, role requirements, available budgets, and an employee's development plan. Employees are encouraged to discuss learning goals with their manager.

8. Expenses and Reimbursements

Business expenses must be necessary, reasonable, supported by valid receipts, and approved under the applicable approval matrix. Expense claims should normally be submitted within 30 calendar days of the transaction. Personal expenses, unsupported claims, duplicate claims, and expenses outside policy may be rejected. Employees should check the current finance procedure for category limits and required approvals.

9. Separation and Return of Company Property

Employees who resign should provide written notice in accordance with their employment agreement. During the notice period, employees are expected to complete reasonable handover activities and continue to protect confidential information. On or before the last working day, employees must return company equipment, identity cards, access tokens, documents, and other property. System access will be handled by the authorized IT team.

Final settlement, eligible payments, deductions, and employment documents will be processed according to the employment agreement, company procedures, and applicable law. Employees should contact HR for questions about the separation process.

10. Policy Questions and Updates

Employees may contact the Human Resources team for clarification, interpretation, or support. The company may revise this sample handbook from time to time. The latest approved version should be consulted where policies change. If a policy conflicts with applicable law or an executed employment agreement, the applicable law or agreement will govern to the extent of the conflict.
